Do you know if you're going the right way? A question many back-seat drivers love to ask, but a question we often ask ourselves after we park the car and think about our life. In the midst of a church split and a confused church community, John writes to address uncertain Christians in order to help them answer that question. Today, we stop and ponder that question, and ask, "can we have assurance we're going the right way?"

In Paul's letter to the Galatians, he is correcting a false understanding that acceptance with God can only be achieved by their efforts. Do we fall into this trap? Do we burden ourselves with trying to make ourselves more acceptable to God? Tonight, Paul will show us the futility of this thinking and how the gospel frees us from such a burden.
