For the third time in his letter, John turns to the matter of Christians loving each other. This shows us it's obviously a non-negotiable and something he wants to elevate even more. But, what happens when people like you and I read John and think, "Thanks again, John, we get it, but we just find it really hard to do"? The truth is, there are plenty of occasions in church life where we need motivation and encouragement to live this out and that's where John wants to take us.

What are you especially proud of? Maybe an academic degree you hold, or your well-earned career, a shiny new car, your friend-group or your family. As we come to the end of Galatians, we will see that Paul takes pride in the most humiliating act in history - the crucifixion of Jesus. What is it about the weakness of the Cross that Paul finds so utterly powerful? Come and hear how the crucifixion reshapes everything in our life - or how it ought to reshape everything, and how it often times fades into the background as nothing more than a religious symbol.
